NEWTOWN, Conn./EWORLDWIRE/April 5, 2010 --- "Our young people - a population that environmental organizations tend to overlook - will inherit the mess we've made of our water, air and land. We need to provide them with a set of skills that will enable them to appreciate and care for our finite set of natural resources," commented Julie Lyonn Lieberman.

On March 11, The Green Anthem song was performed by an estimated 6,000,000 school children across the United States as one of 7 songs performed in the 25th anniversary of The World's Largest Concert, an event created by MENC: Music Educators National Conference and hosted by Florence Henderson.

How can one person make a difference in a culture that prizes profit over the earth's sustainability?

"Back in the late 1960s, I was inspired by folk singer Pete Seeger's dream of cleaning up the Hudson River in New York City. I had the opportunity to crew on the Clearwater Sloop he and his fans built when I was only 16 years old. This experience taught me the power one individual can have to effect change and also alerted me to the fact that our environment requires global attention," shared Lieberman.

"By participating in The Green Anthem Program, or by singing or playing The Green Anthem song, a generation of thinkers, leaders, and doers will be inspired," stated Lieberman. "I've always believed in the power of community."

The Green Anthem song and The Green Anthem Program - created by author and composer Julie Lyonn Lieberman -incorporates creativity and leadership, and can mobilize communities via their students with easy-to-implement steps towards a greener earth.
